Mark A. Bruzonsky

MARK A. BRUZONSKY, an American in town, is three in one; an expert in international relations, a lawyer and a journalist.

When we visited him in his room, we found a copy of 'Taking Sides', a recently published book on US-Israel relations. It has condemned what it describes as 'American partiality towards Israel', and reflects the views of a Jew who is against Zionism.

He believes that Israel has a bad case very efficiently presented while the Arabs have a good case but very badly presented. He does admit that there are certain prejudices against the Arabs in the American society but he also blames what he calls, 'the inefficiency of the Arabs'. All the Arab ambassadors put together are not as efficient as a single Israeli ambassador in US, he said.

Mark has studied at Princeton from where he did his Masters in International Relations and then studied law at the New York University. Now living in Washington, he is working as a political consultant (specialisation: U.S. foreign policy) and is also a journalist.

So this American foreign policy expert does not support his country's policy towards the Middle East but thinks that the Arabs have also allowed themselves to be misunderstood.

Mark does not rule out the idea of American intervention in the Gulf war and believes that it will only be to prevent the Iranians from inflicting a defeat on the Iraqis. He thinks that the Americans will gain some short-term benefits from this intervention, including the sympathies of the so-called moderate Arab nations, but in the long term, he says, it will further radicalise the area and exacerbate anti-American feelings in the region.

Mark is 36 but not married, though he was prompt to add that he does have 'a very special woman back home who is not Jewish! about 30 per cent of the Jews marry in Jewish families, he added.

He thinks that there are some anti-American feelings in the Third World but the canvas of relationships has some bright patches too. 'You dislike the Americans but you are very much interested in American universities and even those who are most critical of the USA want to study there.

He says that it is not America that the people in the Third World are against. 'They are against the American policies which could be defined as imperialist, but the same could be said about Soviet policies too'.

Complaint against two surgeons dismissed

ISLAMABAD, Feb. 26: Chief Justice (Retd) Sardar Muhammad Iqbal Wafaqi Mohtasib (Ombudsman) has dismissed after investigation the complaint of a government officer who had charged two surgeons of the Central Government Polyclinic with rendering that officer sexually impotent after an operation to re-route his faecal passage.

The complaint, Mohammad Ahmed Chaudhry, had accused the surgeons of negligence and inefficiency, as he had been told that the operation, called Colostomy, would not create any other complication or physical defect. However, nearly three years after the operation he found that he had completely lost his potency.

The Ombudsman, before giving his verdict on the complaint, examined the two surgeons, Dr. Inamul Haq Shami and Dr. Sikandar Hayat Khan, and took their testimony. He also examined Dr. Rashid A. Khan, a senior surgeon of the Rawalpindi General Hospital who had given a second opinion in the case. The complainant was given due opportunity to make rejoinder to the surgeons' statements, which he did.

The surgeons stated that the operation had been faultless and that the complainant had said nothing about his trouble for two years. The court demanded damages from them.

In his Final Order, Mohtasib has given the view that there was no negligence on the part of the doctors in diagnosing the complaint or on the part of Dr. Chaudhry in performing the operation. He has also stated that the complainant was not fully informed of the diagnosis and that the operation was not performed with the consent of the patient. He has also stated that the complainant was not fully informed of the diagnosis and that the operation was not performed with the consent of the patient. He has also stated that the complainant was not fully informed of the diagnosis and that the operation was not performed with the consent of the patient.

The Ombudsman has also stated that the complainant was not fully informed of the diagnosis and that the operation was not performed with the consent of the patient. He has also stated that the complainant was not fully informed of the diagnosis and that the operation was not performed with the consent of the patient.

Concluding the Ombudsman's report, he said that publication of the complaint and the names of the surgeons involved brought a bad name to the Press. He averred that the Press has a duty to report about public complaints and should strive to ensure that the issue is not prejudicially reported. —PTI

Ayub Park entry fee criticised

RAWALPINDI, Feb. 26: A large number of people, including the Chairmen of various Zakat Committees, prominent lawyers and elite of the town, have criticised the imposition of entry fee in Ayub Park.

In a joint statement they urged the government to withdraw such taxes which are not only unusual but also against the interest of the people thereby stopping them to go such parks for enjoying clean air. No entertainment or amusement was provided to the people in the park and could justify the imposition of entry fee.

According to the statement there was no such extra tax on any institution have such kind of tax on in the picnic spot. They said that the Board has already imposed taxes on the people.

The tax could be removed if it was imposed on people in the zoo which intends to set up. —ppj
